Pemerintah Kota Tanjungpinang, melalui Rumah Detensi Tanjungpinang, telah berupaya menyediakan akses layanan kesehatan bagi deteni berkebutuhan khusus. ABSTRACT

This research aims to analyze the fulfillment of essential rights for detainees with special needs in Tanjungpinang City, focusing on the fulfillment of health rights during the 2018-2023 period. It employs a normative juridical approach to examine the extent to which the law is present in the implementation of health rights fulfillment for detainees with special needs. The research results show that the fulfillment of health rights for detainees with special needs in Tanjungpinang City has been pursued in accordance with applicable laws and regulations. The Tanjungpinang City Government, through the Tanjungpinang Detention House, has made efforts to provide access to health services for detainees with special needs. However, challenges remain in maintaining the quality of health services, such as the availability of medicines and the expertise of medical personnel in handling specific health conditions. This study concludes that although efforts have been made to fulfill the health rights of detainees with special needs in Tanjungpinang City, commitment and joint efforts from all parties are still needed to improve the comprehensive and sustainable fulfillment of health rights for detainees with special needs.
